In Washington, DC, the External Affairs Minister will hold discussions with his counterpart, Secretary of State Antony Blinken. He will also be meeting Cabinet members and Senior Officials of the Administration dealing with the bilateral relationship." The MEA said in a statement. This comes at the back of a massive vaccine shortage at a time when India is reeling under the second wave of the coronavirus pandemic. While New Delhi is engaged with the US firms and the administration in procurement and production of the vaccines, it is going to top Jaishankar's agenda on this visit, says sources. While seeking vaccines for India, the minister will also push the issue of paucity of the drug in the Indian subcontinent. Bangladesh and Nepal were sent batches of vaccine from India, but now as their population waits for the second dose, the scarcity and alarming situation in India does not allow New Delhi to send them the batch for the subsequent dose. The larger perspective would be to engage the United Nations Security Council and meet United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres in New York, who had criticised rich countries for stockpiling Covid-19 vaccines."The latest moral outrage is the failure to ensure equity in vaccination efforts," Guterres told a ministerial-level

Amid a rise in infections in Covid patients, researchers and medical practitioners have questioned if the over-prescription of drugs, whose usage is not supported by evidence, is responsible for these ailments.

New Delhi. As the cases of Covid treatment-linked diseases like mucormycosis witness a steep rise, questions have been raised about combinations of repurposed and experimental medicines recommended by health practitioners in India as a one-size-fits-all solution.

Researchers, medical practitioners and citizens have been debating on social media if over-prescription of drugs is responsible for the rising ailments in Covid patients. While the jury is still out if the overuse of steroids is responsible for the ising number of mucormycosis (also known as black fungus) cases, experts have cautioned against the excessive use of steroids. "Giving steroids at high doses, or steroids for a prolonged duration can cause secondary infections from mucor, drug-resistant candida, and drug-resistant bacteria. Add to it muscle weakness and high blood sugars and any number of other problems," says professor S Vincent Rajkumar from the US-based non-profit academic medical centre Mayo Clinic. Rajkumar is an expert on steroids like Dexamethasone. His earlier research on low-dose Dexamethasone in patients with testis cancer showed survival with lower toxicity than a higher dose of the steroids in myeloma cases. "I made my career on Dexamethasone and how a lower dose saves lives. This is truly a double-edged sword that, when used without care, can cause tremendous harm," he adds. Authorities in India have also cautioned against the inappropriate use of steroids in treating Covid. "When doses are given in an irrational manner, steroids can do more harm than good instead of helping the patient," Dr VK Paul, member of NITI Aayog told reporters at a press conference on Saturday. But steroids are only a small part of a widely desolate problem. Patients often receive a blanket prescription that has a combination of drugs including antibiotics like amoxicillin, painkillers like paracetamol, drug Ivermectin, antiviral Remdesivir along with Zinc supplements, from the outset of diagnosis. The results from several large-scale randomised clinical trials (RCT) hardly present any benefits of these medicines. For instance, Azithromycin has been proven to be ineffective in the treatment of Covid. Another large clinical trial from 176 hospitals in the UK. Similarly, another trial conducted by the University of Oxford found no benefit from both the antibiotics, Azithromycin and Doxycycline.

New Delhi. The Indian Army has dismissed a report which claimed that there was a minor face-off between the Indian and Chinese soldiers in Galwan Valley in eastern Ladakh in the first week of May. The report in the English daily claimed that a minor face-off took place between soldiers in the no-patrolling zone in Galwan Valley this month. The report, however, added that "no clash occurred and the two sides disengaged quickly".

The Indian Army on Sunday dismissed the report and clarified that no such incident took place in May while adding that the "article seems to be inspired by sources who may be trying to derail the ongoing process for early resolution of issues."

"It is clarified that NO such minor face-off has taken place between Indian and Chinese troops at #Galwan Valley in Eastern Ladakh in the first week of May 2021 as reported," the Indian Army said in a series of tweets. The article seems to be inspired by sources who may be trying to derail the ongoing process for early resolution of issues in eastern Ladakh, the Army added. Taking note of the report dated May 23, the Indian Army requested the media to clarify actual versions of such incidents from authorised sources only. "#Media professionals are requested to to clarify actual versions/positions on incidents involving the Indian Army from authorised sources in the #IndianArmy and not base reports on un-corroborated inputs from third parties," the Indian Army said. In its report, the newspaper quoted a senior its report, the newspaper quoted a senior government official and said there was a minor face-off between Indian and Chinese troops in the no-patrolling zone in Galwan

Valley in the first week of May.

The official also told the daily that China still has camps beyond the no-patrolling zone and there has not been any reduction in troop deployment since last year. Ties between India and China suffered a hit following a deadly clash in the Galwan valley in eastern Ladakh in June last year, over a month after the border standoff began between the Indian and Chinese militaries at multiple friction points in the region.

Following a series of military and diplomatic talks, India and China completed the withdrawal of troops and weapons from the North and South banks of Pangong lake in February. The two sides are now engaged in talks to extend the disengagement process to the remaining friction points
